Read the following information carefully and answer the given questions.

The process of self-improvement often has a destructive impact mentally and emotionally. If you ask what you “should do” or “should be” you become set up for self-rejection. Your mind immediately creates a conceptual image of what you should be and another part of your mind determines that you are not the conceptual image you just created. The voice in your head makes a judgment that you are a failure for not meeting the mental image and you end up feeling “not good enough.” All of this because you don’t meet the conceptual image you fabricated in your mind; an image that isn’t even real.

You don’t have to change what you are or what you have to be happy, but instead, change the emotion you are expressing. If you are expressing anger then you will feel angry. If you express jealousy or guilt, then you will feel jealousy and guilt. If you are expressing love then you are likely to experience happiness and fulfilment. Think back to different times in your life and make a note of what you were expressing. We often associate feeling happy with who we were with what we had, or what we were doing. Those external things were not making us happy. It was the love we were expressing at the time that fulfilled us.

Studies show that people who are happy are spending time gardening, with people they love, and working on things they are passionate about. The common element is not the things they achieve, or what they are doing. The common element that creates happiness is that they are expressing love in all those instances. They are expressing love to who they are with or for what they are doing.

Read the following information carefully and answer the given questions.

The process of self-improvement often has a destructive impact mentally and emotionally. If you ask what you “should do” or “should be” you become set up for self-rejection. Your mind immediately creates a conceptual image of what you should be and another part of your mind determines that you are not the conceptual image you just created. The voice in your head makes a judgment that you are a failure for not meeting the mental image and you end up feeling “not good enough.” All of this because you don’t meet the conceptual image you fabricated in your mind; an image that isn’t even real.

सिनेमा आधुनिक युग में मनोरंजन का सबसे लोकप्रिय साधन बन गया है। सिनेमा की शुरुआत भारत में परतंत्रता काल में हुई। दादा साहेब फाल्के जैसे जुझारू लोगों ने निजी प्रयत्नों से सिनेमा को भारत में प्रतिष्ठित किया। मनुष्य के लिए मनोरंजन अत्यन्त आवश्यक है। आज भारत का चलचित्र उद्योग विश्व सिनेमा से प्रतिस्पर्धा कर रहा है। सिनेमा विज्ञान की अद्भुत देन है। फिल्मों के निर्माण में अनेक प्रकार के वैज्ञानिक यंत्रों का प्रयोग होता है। शक्तिशाली कैमरे, स्टूडियो, कंप्यूटर, संगीत के उपकरणों आदि के मेल से फिल्मों का निर्माण होता है। सिनेमा का निर्माण एक कला है। शुरुआत में मूक सिनेमा का प्रचलन था अर्थात् सिनेमा में किसी प्रकार की आवाज नहीं होती थी। लोग केवल चलता-फिरता चित्र देख सकते थे। चित्र के साथ ध्वनि के मिश्रण से इस क्षेत्र में क्रांति आई। भारत की

व्यवसायिक राजधानी मुंबई इसका केन्द्र है इसीलिए यह मायानगरी के नाम से प्रसिद्ध है। सिनेमा को समाज का दर्पण माना जाता है। आज के युग में इसका अपना विशेष स्थान है। चलचित्र मनोरंजन का अच्छा साधन है, व दूसरी और शिक्षा का एक अच्छा माध्यम भी है। जिस वस्तु का जितना ज्ञान आँखों से देखकर होता है उसका उतना प्रभाव उस विषय को पढ़कर या सुनकर नहीं होता। चलचित्र से हमारे ज्ञान में वृद्धि होती है। जिन कुरीतियों को दूर करने में महान उपदेशक, प्रचारक तथा शिक्षक असफल हो जाते हैं उनको दूर करने में शिक्षाप्रद फिल्में बहुत सहायक सिद्ध हुई हैं। इस तरह सिनेमा वर्तमान समय में मनोरंजन का सबसे बड़ा साधन बना हुआ है।

Read the following information carefully and answer the given questions.

Your heart beats around 60 times a minute, delivering nutrients and removing waste from every cell in your body. It has been doing this since you were in the womb – the heart forms 18 days into foetal development and begins to pump blood about three days later.

But for all we know about this vital organ, researchers are still learning new things about it. The heart is made of cardiac muscle. Unlike some muscles in the body, we can't control it. Instead, the heart's speed is controlled by the autonomic nervous system.

The nerves that relay input about our required heart rate connect to a specialised centre in the wall of the right atrium (one of the heart's four chambers), known as the sinoatrial (SA) node.

The SA node is composed of specialised pacemaker cells, which send out an electrical impulse throughout the cardiomyocytes (cardiac cells), ensuring the heart beats properly.

But the SA node can be dysfunctional. These faults can be acquired or inherited. Acquired dysfunction is more common, often caused by age, certain medications and lifestyle factors such as increased BMI, diabetes and hypertension. Many people who have a dysfunction may not have symptoms.

One of the most common symptoms of a dysfunctional SA node, experienced by about two million people a year in the UK, is arrhythmia. This is where the heart beats too fast, too slow or irregularly. There are a variety of treatment options for arrhythmia including cardioversion, pacemakers and cardiac ablation.

Read the following information carefully and answer the given questions.

Mars is known for its thin atmosphere, where CO₂ dominates and provides most of the atmospheric mass and pressure. Water on Mars is currently found on the surface as a layer of ice – several kilometres thick – at the north pole. It also appears as seasonal frost at the coldest times of the year, and in the atmosphere as vapour and ice. Nevertheless, the Martian atmosphere is extremely dry compared to Earth's, with about 100 times less water. While precipitation on Earth results in water layers several centimetres thick, water that would precipitate on Mars would only form a thin film of less than a millimetre.

The evidence suggests that Mars was not always the cold, arid planet we observe today. There is plenty of evidence of water on Mars' surface in the distant past – about four billion years ago. At that time, liquid water flowed in great streams and stagnated in the form of pools or lakes. For liquid water to circulate and reside on the surface long enough to leave these marks, there must have been a (A)_____ different climate than the one we see today. Mars, Earth and Venus probably formed from the gradual accumulation of the same basic materials, which means that they must have had great similarities early in their history. But while Earth and Venus have retained most of their thick atmosphere, Mars, because of its small size and low gravity, has lost most of its atmosphere.
