Read the given passage and answer the questions that follow.

Building up character needs determination, practice, observation, imitation, clarity of thoughts and visions, etc. A person should be determined to practice the activities of great men and women with clarity of thought and vision.

Real character is found in a man of character. A man of character is the real prince among men. In society, he is respected by all and sundry. He is a moral force in society. A man of character does not tell lies even out of fun, exploit anyone in society, misappropriate the money and wealth of others, and even speak ill of others. He is always true to his words and deeds.

A man of character is found once in a blue moon. The nation feels proud of a man of character. He may be poor but he is a great asset to the nation.

A man of character can inculcate his thoughts and ideas into the mind of the common people so that they may form their character. A man of character is God-fearing, honest, sincere, truthful, dutiful and gentle without duplicity, flattery, pride etc.

Character is of great importance in man's life. "Wealth lost, nothing is lost, health lost, something is lost and character lost, everything is lost." — goes a wise maxim to signify character. It can win people's hearts, satisfy people, and fortify the base of becoming great in life. It is sunshine that shoots its brightness on people around. Character leads a man and his nation to the top level of development and prosperity.

It is supreme quality and virtue that makes one popular, faithful, and trustworthy, and one's life is crowned with success. Character fetches success, happiness, prosperity, and social status to the man of character. A poor man with a stainless character can be respected, no doubt. Character is a good quality that makes a man great in society. It never misguides anyone. Man can win people's minds by dint of character.

Character indicates good deals, good thoughts, and good habits. The character is the crown and glory like the rose — that spreads its fragrance all around

Read the given passage and answer the questions that follow.

A blind belief in augury, magic, omens, hearsay, the baseless thing and illogical manners is superstition. It finds fertile soil and a breeding ground for human ignorance and a lack of scientific knowledge.

In today's world, people still believe in omens and auguries. Even in the age of rapid advancement of science and technology, they are afraid like their forefathers living in the caves and connecting their misfortunes with mysterious and unknown forces. Such a state of mind always gives rise to various types of superstitions.

All superstitions have their origin in human psychology of fear of ill luck, insecurity and the dread of inexplicable forces in nature. When some phenomena cannot be made out or explained, people start dreading them and assign them supernatural, divine and mysterious origins. Tantriks, priests, godmen, babas, and other vested interests also help in spreading superstitions. In superstition, the astrologers, priests, stargazers, magicians, god-men, quacks and babas have a very good business.

Firm beliefs in charms, supernatural powers, ghosts, goblins, witches and evil spirits have their deep roots in superstitions. It is vile as it makes us deprived of self-confidence, self-control, rationality, farsighted power, etc. by weakening our willpower and spirit. It is a bar to take an unswerving determination or decision to do anything either at present or in future. It results from ignorance and irrational fear.

There are lucky and unlucky numbers, days, things, animals, birds, etc. Most people do not intend to start any work on Saturday. They think this day to be an unlucky day. Many people are not willing to cut down bamboo on Tuesday because the cutting down of bamboo on this day may bring an ill-luck and suffering to them.

The English still think of the number 13 as inauspicious and ominous. They refuse to occupy even room number 13. Many women are still lynched in some European countries because they are mistaken as witches. Our superstitions have blurred the dividing line between religion and blind belief, bigotry, spiritualism, prayer, incantation, etc.

This is the age of reason, science and technology, yet many primitive superstitions continue endlessly.
